The daily news keeps repeating one particular news in different words again and again hoping people would listen. It is the news about the trouble of our environment. When will these problems be solved? Fortunately some people are working hard to solve them but more hands are desperately required. If you want to join this people, you can choose a career that let you work for the environment. A few options are given below for you to choose from:

One area of careers related to the environment is the media. For instance, if you are a journalist, you can write articles about how people are developing the solar electricity. Another type of journalist is a photojournalist who can take pictures of people planting trees to help to clean the air. If you choose a career as a television journalist, you can create stories about people using alcohol to power their cars etc.

One form of media that is becoming more important is the internet. If your work is related to the internet, you can set web sites for the environmental organizations, such as the Nature Conservancy etc. You can study communication journalism or media studies to become a journalist.

(13)

Careers in medicine can also be helpful in protecting nature. For example, when the sea birds are covered with oil that has leaked into the sea, the veterinarians can save them. It goes without saying that to be a veterinarian one needs to learn a lot of science. These are just a few of the satisfying careers in which you can work for the environment. Those who choose to work for the environment, contribute to lengthen the life of our planet Earth and nothing less.

(13)

Questions:

- 1) What news is repeatedly telecast and people hardly take any note of it?
- 2) How can the internet medium be used to solve the problems faced by the environment?
- 3) How can the veterinarians help in protecting nature?
- 4) How can a photojournalist help in protecting nature?
